Please consider the following guidelines as you prepare remarks for your roundtable presentation at Convention. Better communication of your ideas means more attendees will engage with your work. Importantly, staying within the time suggestions is respectful of other authors and maximizes opportunities for discussion around your work beyond Convention.

Before You Get to Convention
- Contact other presenters in your session to decide which of you will serve as your timekeeper.
- Decide together whether you will include virtual attendees in your roundtable via the Whova Roundtable feature.

Prepare for a 12 minute MAX presentation on your paper.
Given this time constraint, your task within this session is to provide the highlights of your paper. A major objective is to whet the appetite of the listener to read your paper.

- Visual aids should be simple, clear, and readable.
- Please make sure to enable captioning, if presenting virtually.
- Consider ways to make your presentation accessible to a diverse audience.
- Bring your laptop with you to your presentation if you are including virtual attendees.

We encourage you to include the following points in your presentation:
- Explain the problem you investigated and its relation to existing research.
- Briefly indicate your methods, but prioritize findings and implications (not literature review).
- State specifically what is different and/or interesting about your approach.
- Discuss the implications of your work for researchers, practitioners, and instructors.

Do not just read your paper!
This approach does little to generate interest on the part of the audience, and it is an ineffective way to communicate ideas.

Additional information to consider for your roundtable presentation:
- Upload your paper to All Academic NO LATER than October 24th. Upload your paper by replacing the proposal in All Academic.
- Remember to observe social distancing and masking protocols.
